Spring is finally here and it is time to go outside with your little ones and explore the environment. Here are a few fun activities you can do as a family without breaking the bank.

- Go on a bug hunt
- Melt some crayons in the sun and explore the shapes they create
- Play in the sandbox
- Use a magnifying glass to search and investigate the yard/park
- Explore the water table
- Dig in the dirt and look for bugs/insects
- Catch and release butterflies, ladybugs, frogs, etc.
- Play catch/kick with a ball
- Stack and balance your favorite rocks
- Spray the soil with water and play road construction with rocks, twigs and construction vehicles.
- Play Simon Says... (e.g. "Look for something that is red.")
- Blow some bubbles
- Fly a kite
- Explore cause and effect by filling and emptying
- Work on vocabulary by talking about the weather, flowers, people, places (e.g. "What's the weather like?")
- Outdoor picnic

Every activity, every conversation or every experience is a learning opportunity. Take the technology (e.g. iPads, phones, tablets) away and let your little ones learn by experiencing and exploring their environments.
